THE COLOR OF THE SEASON. -The prediction that blue would be the popular color of the season is more than verified. for already blue suits have become "common" on the streets. Ladies make a mistake in selecting blue shades that are too light and bright; unless the blue is as dark as indigo-indeed, scarcely more than blue-black-it makes a commonplace costume. The long dark blue polonaise, fastened by silver or steel buttons, and worn over a black silk skirt, is a favorite costume for morning and afternoon walks, traveling, etc. Camel's hair, water-proof cloth. or cashmere is selected for the over-

UPPER SEIRCS. - Notwithstanding the popularity of redingotes and of fully trimmed skirts with basques, upper skirts are by no means banished, but will hold their own for yet another season. These are invariably long, and two designs meet with most favor. The first is composed of from two to four square-cornered breadths, open in front to disclose a tablier, or else lapped near the belt. These are usually very little trimmed, and are draped to form a pouf behind, or else two wings. The other is a long apron, often finished by a flounce, and rounded up the sides to to suffer her to fail in flesh; and with disclose the flounces on the back breadths. A third fancy has a single wide breadth of silk falling on each side, showing something of both front and back trimming; the last has the front sides cut off shorter and squarely, calving, and many prefer to have them while the back is very long, and may be caught together behind by sashes. In all such over-skirts it is necessary that the upper skirt breadths should be sewed into the belt of the lower skirt, and also that they be tacked low down on the under-skirt. This also does away with the ungraceful habit many ladies have of lifting up the over-skirt when seating themselves, - Harper's

They have a jaunty, coquettish air, and seem to belong to the saucy little hats far back on the head. The English walking jacket is revived, and is one of the most comfortable and completely useful of sacques. It is made of all kinds of rough cloths, and finished, as before, with velvet, silk and velveteen. It is more frequently closed by metal and jet buttons than heretofore; and sometimes asserts its right to novelty by appearing in jet passementerie. But generally it sticks to its plain facings and cordings, and is no loser in beauty thereby. Now and then you see it in some light cloth, covered with braiding and embroidery, and decked out with jet-even steel sometimes-but this is a rare and not attractive combination of styles. Sacques, slashed and half-fitting as of old, though rather longer and with large wing-like sleeves (generally having a coat sleeve inside), are made in various THE REDINGOTE, though called light cloths both in dark and light colmachine and by hand, and bravely decked with beads. The novelty is a a phrase may be used. It is a little mannish in general appearance, but sufficiently feminine to be very pretty and, inferentially, becoming. The most common feeding is hay alone and often very poor hay at that. The main point is to keep the animal in a this object some change and variety of food is highly important. And here it may be remarked that cows in calf should not, as a general rule, be milked the last month or six weeks before run dry as many as eight or ten weeks. The yield of milk is better the coming season, and holds out better than if they are milked up to the time of calv-

How Early Should Heifers Have Calves?

There is a great difference in the practice of farmers in this respect some feeding high and breeding as early as THE SHAWLS OF THE SEASON. The possible, and others keeping the heifers camel's hair shawls are unusually hand- away from the bull until the third year, some, this fall. The colors are richer feeling quite satisfied with a calf at and clearer; the beautiful Tyrian red three years old. It is admitted that the being conspicuous, and the designs heifers grow larger that breed late, and finer and more delicate. More Complete Weather Reports

There is a certain stiffness and formality about old probabilities' reports which common people would like to see changed for something more frank and open-hearted. The wh le thing could be made more cheerful reading and more interesting to the young if some newspaper man had the weather to take care of. For instance, where the report now reads, "for the northwest rising barometer, with cold northerly winds, a right minded journalist would say Folks in Wisconsin and Minnesota will get up and git to-morrow; it will be cold enough to freeze the hair on a hitchin | post. Shanghaed Sailors.

Since the arrival at San Francisco of the ship Sunrise, on which such cruelties were practiced by Capt, Clarke, mate Harris and others, the people of San Francisco have been pretty thoroughly waked up on the question of sailor's rights. Several members of the Sunrise crew have obtained judgments in their favor in the courts, Clarke, Harris, and Kelly have been arrested, and Maloney is notly pursued. A number of the crew, supposed to be parties to the outrages, have been ironed and placed in jail, and when the United States marshal attempted to take them out as witnesses, on Saturday, the crowd about the jail was so threatening that he dared not do it. It seems that a great business in "shanghacing," that is, kidnapping, men for service on California-bound vessels, is done at New York. The Baltie, Capt. Taylor, which recently arrived at the Golden Gate, had a crew composed almost entirely of shanghaed men, not one of whom was a sailor. The agents of these vessels hang about New York and pick up anybody that falls in their way. Men are allured to the vessels by promise of advance pay, which of course they never receive; but after they once get on board they are treated in the most inhuman manner, and there is no help for New York dependent upon them, have filed complaints in the courts at San grounds of scarlet, black or white, with by a haifer in her second and tilled year. Cheapening Art.

That we Americans are an ingenious

models, according to his specious theory that sculpture is merely a question of the superficial accuracy of a sufficient of a person; the ingenious contrivances and tools of Powers to make the surface of his statues as smooth as ivoryturning; the making of wood carvings in molds; and other ways of dispensing with creative genius, by which we so diligently labor to transform art into a mere industry. But the best hit at cheapening the works of our own artists to the buyer, instead of the producer, has recently been made by a shrewd American lady, who, in visiting a wellknow studio here in quest of genre paintings, finding one to her mind, demanded to know the price. Upon being told, she immediately said: "I wish you to make me a copy of it," naming a sum which bore the same relation to the original before her that a cheap copy does to an old master in the Uffizi gallery. On being assured that the artist did not repeat his pictures at any less rate than he asked for his first, she naively remarked that she could not see any difference to him in copying one of his own pictures or one in the gallery, PEERLESS except it would be more convenient and easier of execution, and his price of both copies ought to be alike. By the same rule, if he asked one thousand francs for the first picture, he could readily afford a copy at one hundred. The argument did not strike our artist as practically conclusive, so far as his interests were concerned; but as he acknowledged to me that the fair bargainer was theoretically in the right, may we not live to see its fruits in some artists consenting to make copies at copy prices of their popular work? A 'Cleopatra" or "West Wind" senior, that sells for five or ten thousand dollars, would be followed by scores of sisters at one-fifth those prices; and so with the "Niagaras," "Rocky Mountains," "Andes," and other canvases of the painters. Commend me to the Yankee brain for devices to cheapen art. It was one which discovered that copies made from copies were the most desirable, because even cheaper than the slopwork made at the gallery itself.

DURATION OF TIMBER. - It is a curious fact, and one of great practical importance in structural science, that in the salt mines of Poland and Hungary the galleries are supported by wooden pillars, which are found to last unimpaired for ages, in consequence of be ing impregnated with the salt, while pillars of brick and stone, used for the same purpose, crumble away in a short time by the decay of their mortar. It is also found that wooden piles, driven into the mud of salt flats and marshes, last for an unlimited time, and are used for the foundations of brick and stone edifices; and the practice of docking timber, by immersing it for some time is generally admitted to promote its durability. There are some experiments which appear to show that, after the dry rot has commenced, immersion in salt water effectually checks its progress and preserve the remainder of the timber. If care be taken to renew the coat of paint as often as it decays, wood on the outside of the buildings may be made to last for centuries; paint, however, is no preservative against the internal or dry rot, notwithstanding the opinion so
